Henne auf einem Korb, Westmoreland, Dekoration Abel & Wasserberg & Co.

Shirley Smith: Hello Siegmars,

I wanted to tell you that Abb. 2007-3/411 in PK 2007-3, page 389 is a Westmoreland hen dish that was decorated by the decorating firm of Abel & Wasserberg & Co., New York City. This type of decoration was called "Charlton decoration". There is a whole book written on this type of handpainted decoration by Lori and Michael Palmer. They have a Web site here: <http://www.glasshouseenc.com/>

The Westmoreland 5" hen dish, the 7" hen dish, and the standing rooster were all decorated in this style between 1945 and 1960. I am attaching a picture which shows these.

This type of decoration was also done after Westmoreland's closing by a decorator named Louise Plues, who had previously worked for Westmoreland and did the decorations on items produced from the moulds which Rosso Wholesale Glass Dealers, Port Vue, Pennsylvania, bought at the Westmoreland closing auction.

In den späten 1980-er und in den 1990-er Jahren beschäftigten sie verschiedene Glasfabriken - Summit, Viking, L. E. Smith, Fenton und Mosser - die besondere Serien mit den alten Formen herstellten.]

Smith: Dear Siegmur,

I am attaching a picture of an advertisement from Rosso that shows the way that they painted the hen dishes. The advertisement is from Glass Collectors Digest, April / May 1994. The painting done by Rosso was similar to the Charleton painting done by Abel & Wasserberg. The painting at Rosso was done by Louise Plues.

Shirley

SG: Hello Shirley,

many thanks for your important informations!

With best wishes, Siegmur
